

How To Protect and Save Valuable Possessions In The Office From An Earthquake

Hi, my name is Scott Haskins,

I'm the ONLY emergency preparedness expert and author to help YOUR PUBLIC on how to protect and save photos, original documents, family history, books, collectibles and memorabilia (see preservationcoach.com).

My message and experience appeals to the heart and soul of the general public! After a disaster hits, and the family is accounted for, what do they cry about for years?!?! Their stuff they can't replace. They want to be prepared. This has HUGE implications for your office! (see back of this flyer)

As an art preservation expert for 45 years and as author of “How To Save Your Stuff From A Disaster,” I’ve got lots of great stories that will entertain your public and a ton of easy-to-use tips to offer your audience on how to prepare...

Let me provide to your organization or company

- Weekly or monthly tips – for office or public outreach
- Longer articles – for newsletters, blogs, website content
 - Provide ongoing education - in office or public outreach - that is fun
 - Consultation for in-house Emergency Preparedness plan
 - Fundraise for your non-profit

Scott M. Haskins, Author, Art Conservator
805 564 3438 scott@saveyourstuff.com

In the Northridge Earthquake and in hurricanes Katrina, Gustave and Ike it was realized that workers (even 1st responders!) did not go back to work after the disaster until they secured family needs including finding their stuff!

Prepare your people so they will get back to work ASAP!

"This information needs to be in the hands of every staff member in every FEMA office in disaster areas." Dr. Bill Henriques, Public Information Officer, Federal Coordinating Officer for Disasters, FEMA, National Contingency Program, Public Affairs

We are very excited about getting the Save Your Stuff message out to all our regional SBDCs and the public. Scott Haskins' approach is perfect for small business' and helping them to prepare for disasters. We encourage all business owners to adopt this message and prepare for emergencies as an essential part of your business plan and mission statement. Deborah Schueneman, CEO, SBDC Net, Information Clearinghouse for small business development centers, nationwide.

As an author and expert in the Human Resource industry, I believe that Save Your Stuff has an essential message for the workplace and emergency preparedness/disaster planning. Scott Haskins' message is clear, his continuing education is top quality and I am intent on getting the word out to all of my contacts in the industry.

Rayanne Thorn at www.rayannethorn.com, nationally recognized HR resource and blogger.

"Scott, people love to listen to you. You are a fun speaker! MCLA's directors were entranced with you while listening to your video-talk." (Consultation on mural conservation/restoration), Isabel Rojas-Williams, Executive Director, Mural Conservancy of Los Angeles (MCLA)

Ask me about speaking at your organization's event